FOREWORD

There is great paucity of authentic information on Old Age Homes (OAHs) in India though demand for such information is steadily on the increase as documented by the HelpAge India current network of 10 urban and 52 rural Elder Helplines. HelpAge India through its OAH Directory Series aims to provide this information for senior citizens, and their family and friends.

This publication, Old Age Homes (OAHs) in and around Kolkata is the second in the series published by HelpAge India. The first was on OAHs in Delhi & National Capital Region which has had a tremendous response. The Kolkata directory provides valuable information on the facilities available in the numerous Homes in the City of Joy. It also provides an interesting insight into the vibrant socio-cultural milieu and the long standing tradition of charity that is so palpable in this city. Noteworthy points include: the first OAH was established here in 1920; a Home specially caring for elderly dementia and other mental problems is located here and is unique in the country; more than 50 percent residents are graduates and the standard of care-giving and nursing services provided is quite high. Some of the Homes in Kolkata, in fact, could well be a model for Homes that are being planned elsewhere.

The Delhi & NCR directory resulted in a proposal for formation of an OAH Delhi & NCR Association to collectively advocate and demand genuinely felt needs of this sector from municipal and other authorities including recognition of OAHs as a public facility and attracting similar concessions as accorded to schools, temples, hospitals, etc in terms of land, electricity, and water charges.

It is hoped that this directory will be immensely useful for senior citizens and others in Kolkata and will also provide some vital baseline information for the state authorities to recognize and better address the problem of providing a comfortable shelter to the elders who need them most.

GUIDELINES FOR SELECTING THE RIGHT HOME

The decision to move to an Old Age Home (OAH) is never an easy one. For many it is often one of the last major decisions taken in one's life. That is perhaps what makes it so vital. With different options available today, particularly in the bigger cities and towns, it is important to make a well-considered and informed selection.

What are the critical questions one should ask?

The questions in the checklist that follows should be used as a guide to some of the things you might want to consider or ask the manager of a home. In addition, you should visit the home to assess these issues. The list of questions is not exhaustive and you may consider other questions that will be relevant to your circumstances.

Furthermore, it is also important to spend some time thinking about your current and likely future requirement before you start looking for a suitable Home.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS (AFTER VISIT)

- Is the atmosphere friendly, safe and comfortable?
- Do any individual residents seem to be unstable or be causing disruptions?
- Are all areas well lit? is the temperature inside comfortable for the residents?
- Do the residents seem happy with the way staff communicates with them?
- Are residents treated with respect as well as in a friendly manner?
- Are there enough staff?
- Do the staff seem trained for elder care, and are they caring and attentive?
- Can one or more of the staff speak your language?
